Open your mind

project description

The main goal of the project is inclusion young people with fewer opportunities in joint initiatives to promote active citizenship among young people and the strengthening of intercultural dialogue.

The main theme is - poetry as intercultural dialogue, which participants will develop their own definition. With our help young people elaborate the common values which are most important to them in life. We will focus also on the problems that touch our communities, where young people will have to decide jointly which of them are most important and take measures to find the causes and solve these problems.

The participants of this project are people aged 16 - 18 years, struggling with economic problems and geographical or educational difficulties. Participants in the project are also people interested in literature, most of which are attending to humanities classes or they are just interested the topic and want to try their hand.

This project will contribute to the develop their creativity and awaken their sense of initiative. Thanks to the intercultural dialogue we want to encourage them to seek knowledge and to arouse a sense of community, solidarity and friendship. Additionally the project aims is to promote international projects, developing teamwork skills and promoting a healthy lifestyle.

We will use the methods and techniques: integration, diagnostic, discussion, developing creative thinking, teaching creative problem solving, group decision making, planning, shaping responsibility and self-reliance, activating methods in teaching nature and the methods and techniques of evaluation.
